The Centro de Estudios Europa Hispánica (CEEH), Technische Universität Dresden and Universität Hamburg are delighted to announce the creation of two fully-funded doctoral scholarships for the study of Spanish Art starting on 1st of October 2020. The scholarships are named after Carl Justi, one of the first German art historians who dedicated himself to the study and research of Spanish art in the 19th century and who is especially known for his biographies on Diego Velázquez (1888) and on Bartolomé Esteban Murillo (1892).

The scholarships are endowed with €20,000, annually for a duration of 36 months for living costs and travel with the option of extension to four years. There are no additional university fees. The doctoral thesis can be written in German or in English.

TOPICS:
The doctoral projects should be located in the area of Spanish art including its reception by German artists, art historians, collectors, and critics. Proposals relating to the period between the Middle Ages and the first two decades of the 20th century are particularly welcome.

The application deadline is 30th June 2020.

For application requirements and further information, please visit for the scholarship at the Technische Universität Dresden: tu-dresden.de/gsw/phil/ikm/kuge/der-fachbereich/aussschreibungen

Applicants should send their applications to:
Prof. Dr. Henrik Karge, Technische Universität Dresden: henrik.karge@tu-dresden.de

Prof. Dr. Margit Kern, Universität Hamburg: margit.kern@uni-hamburg.de

It is possible and recommended to send the applications to both universities and supervisors.

These scholarships have been created through the generosity of CEEH (Centro de Estudios Europa Hispánica) in association with the Carl Justi-Vereinigung e.V. zur Förderung der kunstwissenschaftlichen Zusammenarbeit mit Spanien, Portugal und Iberoamerika.
